“ I met Brittney about a year or so ago. She was one of those people that you immediately felt at ease with. Such a kind, and respectful young woman. I was only around her for a few days, but those days taught me something about my own self, which is, that I, at the age of 62, could take lessons from this woman, on how to be kind to everyone. I hate that I didn't have more time with her, but I will cherish those days I had with her. It saddens me, and breaks my heart, that God called her home at such a young age. She was so full of life. The couple days she stayed with me, she accidentally knocked her nail polish over, and it spilled onto my carpet, and we couldn't get it all up. To this very day, her nail polish is still on that section of the carpet, and it will remain there. She had tried her best to get it up, and while doing so, she was on her knees scrubbing the carpet, and lost her balance, and fell forward! That was a Kodak moment if there ever was one. She and I laughed so hard that night. And when she laughed, her eyes were absolutely breathtaking. You couldn't help but be drawn in, by her and her personality, and those beautiful eyes. I am praying for the families of both her and Chris. I ask that God give them all strength to face the days ahead. Brittney, you will be missed my baby girl. I will never forget the respect you showed me, and the kind person you were. I know you're flying high now, with the angels, and singing to the top of your lungs. Heaven gained a very special angel, and I hope to meet you in the sky when it's my time. Rest In Peace my beautiful friend!

“Brittany was a special to many in recent months during her focus on life. Everyday she shared about her children, giving many a sense of knowing them. May her goodness be remembered every day.

Brittany committed goals to Trent and others, goals which she worked hard to obtain. I had the honor to be a part of the last 7 months, when she was focused on the goals she was pursuing. She was a hard working persevering mother, daughter and friend to many during the same time she was pushing thru obstacles for a better outcome. She gave us hope, support and kindness in her actions.

Brittany will be missed by so many and may her family and children know how much she was respected and appreciated.

I myself will miss many things about Brittany, especially her hope for herself and children. Hope is infectious in our community and we are taught to share our experience, strength and hope with others. Brittany did this on a daily basis. On her toughest day, she didn't give up.

Brittany would say to me during exchanges, "Just looking at you Ms Linda" and now I will say to her, "Just looking at you Brittany", with respect and appreciation for all you gave and all I learned from you during our short time together. May you know peace and unconditional love.

With deepest sympathy to Brittany's children, mother, family and friends, may your days be filled with grace.
