Tribute Wall

“ Lots of fascinating and fond memories of Uncle Doug throughout my life. He gave me my first ever “paying job” as a kid in the sixties. I earned $5 for picking up construction trash around his new homesite. It was the largest bill I’d ever called my own.

This is a simple memory, but there were tons more. And each memory was a significant marker in my life, he had that effect without even trying. Of my favorite memories were the laughs. He could make everyone around him laugh uncontrollably if he desired. In fact he defines the term “laugh till it hurts”. I’ve never been in so much pain from laughter except in his presence.

I’d give anything to hear a “day in the life” story as only he could tell it right now.

*Miss you,
Greg*
