“*Janice was a whole lot of personality and fire cracker packed into her tiny 80 pound body.
I was her first Facebook friend.
She had family members as friends but I was her first official “friend”.
And boy did we hit it off.
Our love for plants and our pets bonded us.
She had a heart as big as Texas.
The love she had for her family was beautiful.
The love she had for life was phenomenal.
She told me she wanted to leave the World better than how she found it.
And she did.
She touched many lives.
She made a difference.
The strength and fight that she had while battling cancer was astounding.
When her loving husband passed way from something he should have easily recovered from I knew her time was coming to an end on this earth.
I knew her Dave felt it so he went before her.
He would never let her transition from this life to the next without him there to greet her and bring her to Heaven’s door.
She’s the brightest star in the sky now.
She is the gentle breeze.
She is the aroma of fresh rain.
And she’s the newest, littlest angel in Heaven (with the biggest attitude).
She earned her wings while here on earth.
I know I’m a better person for having known her.
And as much as my heart is breaking because she’s left us.... I’d go through this grief again just to have the chance to be her friend/sister again.
I love you my friend.
Your fur babies are being well taken care of and your plants will be too.*”

*You can rest easy.
I'll carry your memory and your love in my heart forever.*
