My grandpa was a great man. He didn't deserve the disease he had. He was the sweetest, most kind hearted man I've ever met. He wouldn't hurt anyone. He would be so quiet at family gathering and just watch or he would go downstairs and play pool. He wouldn't interrupt, "which I mean is pretty awesome" and he wouldn't correct anyone. He loved to go on long walks. That was one of his favorite things to do. I would sometimes go on walks with him. Those were some of the best memories. Our walks. When he started getting sick I knew it wasn't going to be good. He had his first fall. Then was his first accident. Then was his not being able to talk. Then there was not being able to eat. Then there were his sleepiness nights. Then came all the medicine. It was God's way of making him better. Now God has my grandpa. They can go on walks together, and everyone in heaven can love him as much as we loved him. The things I will never forget about my grandpa are endless. He always said he loved me, he was proud of me, and he thanked me every time for helping take care of him. Always Remember: forget the bad things sometimes life gives you, and hold on to the good. Zoe Morgan, youngest grandchild of Norvie.
