“ Not a Grandma by blood, but we all called you Grandma. They want us to share our favorite memory, but that's hard, as there are so many. They all stand out, and all are held close to my heart. There was the day you and i decided to go fishing before the men got home from work, just up the street. (I have a habit of fishing with more than one pole or reel) and i had just bought a brand new cane pole. It was propped up along with the others, just waiting to see that bright green cork disappear underwater. You said something to me, and i turned toward you, and as i looked back, my brand new pole was sliding across the top of the water. Before Grandma could say no, i hit the lake to get my pole! It went underwater and so did i. I came back with my fishing pole, without cork, line, sinkers, just the pole, and i was drenched. And when i tell you me and Grandma laughed, i mean we laughed. She scolded me good, but i blew it off. That will stay with me til i draw my last breath. You left many heartbroken, and you shall be sorely missed. I will cherish our memories, and will see you again someday. Rest In Peace Grandma!
